++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy and damp this morning, drier and brighter later.

Today:
A cloudy, grey start with outbreaks of mainly light rain and drizzle, particularly in the north. It will become drier in the afternoon, but will remain rather cloudy with only a few bright spells. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Tonight:
Rather cloudy but largely dry this evening, with the cloud breaking to give some clear skies after midnight. However cloud and patchy rain are likely in the west by morning. Minimum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Monday:
A dry start in the east, but cloud and patchy rain already in the west will slowly become more widespread through the day. Staying mild, with brisk southerly winds. Maximum temperature 17 deg C (63 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Unsettled over the next few days with spells of rain or heavy showers interspersed by some drier, brighter interludes. Often windy, but staying mild.
